Dear teachers,

I heard from several of you that since the change from Box to Google Drive, that many of you have lost track of how to access the files or are not sure what is available. I have attached a document for your reference that shows the files that are stored on Google Drive.

You may access Google Drive by going to drive.google.com. Access to Google Drive has been given to you by Devin Thorpe if you are a current China Teacher. We'll be giving access to the new crop of teachers soon. From the URL, click on the China Teacher folder and click through to the folder and file you are looking for. You can either upload additional files or download the content you select.

IF you do not have a way to get to Google from China, send me a note with the file you are looking for and I will try to get them to you.

Kent

Introduction

The BYU China Teachers Google Drive is a repository of materials which have been used by China Teachers in the past and may prove useful to other teachers. It can be accessed by going to drive.google.com and selecting the file titled BYU China Teachers.

Permission to access this area should be granted to all participants in the BYU China Teachers Program.

It is recommended that new China Teachers download the materials prior to coming to China. Otherwise, a VPN is required and those in China will experience slower download speeds.

This file is current as of April 7, 2015.
