Protecting Ideas in a “Borderless” World

June 14, 2007

Nicholas Wells spent 15 years in the software industry as a programmer and technical writer before entering private legal practice with the Salt Lake City firm of Kirton & McConkie. He has authored 15 trade and textbooks on network security, Linux, and Windows 2000, which have been translated into 12 languages.

Mr. Wells’ legal practice focuses on advising clients in technology and intellectual property law, including copyrights, licensing, trademarks, Internet law, and compliance with international technology and data privacy standards. He interned with the U.S. Department of Justice Antitrust Division (Networks and Technology Section) and the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Mr. Wells holds a Bachelors degree in Linguistics from the University of Utah and a Master of Business Administration degree from Brigham Young University. He obtained his Juris Doctorate from The George Washington University Law School and is licensed to practice law in Utah. He is a member of the Copyright Society of the U.S.A. and the American Intellectual Property Law Assoc.
