

Global Awareness Lecture
Summer 2007

China and India Rising: The End of American Economic Supremacy?

Brian Reynolds

Second Secretary/Vice Consul, U.S. Embassy, New Delhi, India

Wednesday, 1 August

NOON

238 HRCB

Everything You Ever Wanted to Know about Family Life in the Foreign Service
(and were afraid to ask)

Reynolds Family Q&A

Wednesday, 1 August, 3:00 P.M., B092 JFSB

Learn firsthand from the Reynolds family about the challenges and opportunities that await you and your current (or future) family in a diplomatic career. Topics include overseas school, expatriate networks, dealing with change, and other concerns living life abroad, as well as your own questions and concerns.

Sponsored by BYU Foreign Service Student Organization.

Join the campus network that helps you prepare for a career in diplomacy at fssso.byu@gmail.com

Brian Reynolds is a mid-level officer, who has served in Washington, D.C.; as staff officer to the ambassador in Beijing, China; and as vice consul in New Delhi, India. Prior to the State Department, Reynolds was vice president of a firearms company that developed and produced a popular military rifle. He received a degree in international relations from the David M. Kennedy Center for International Studies and an MPA from the Marriott School of Management at Brigham Young University. He and his wife are the parents of six children; the oldest will be a BYU freshman this fall.

<http://kennedy.byu.edu>

kcpublications@byu.edu

BRIGHAM YOUNG UNIVERSITY
DAVID M. KENNEDY CENTER
FOR INTERNATIONAL STUDIES