Daniel Mark
Assistant professor of political science
Villanova University

Thursday, 14 January 2016
11:00 A.M.
Varsity Theatre

Daniel Mark is an assistant professor of political science at Villanova University in Pennsylvania, where he teaches political theory, philosophy of law, American government, and politics and religion. Mark also holds the rank of battalion professor and serves as the university representative to the performance review board for Villanova’s Navy Reserve Officers’ Training Corps unit. He is the faculty advisor to the mock trial team and to the men’s club lacrosse team and was a mentor in the university’s Faith and Learning Scholars Program. Mark also serves on the nine-member, bipartisan U.S. Commission on International Religious Freedom (USCIRF) and recently participated in USCIRF delegations to Azerbaijan, Indonesia, Malaysia, Nigeria, and Vietnam. His writing on religious freedom has appeared in Foreign Affairs, US News & World Report, Investor’s Business Daily, and his hometown Philadelphia Inquirer, and he has appeared on CNN, Al Jazeera America, CBS Radio, and Relevant Radio. He received a BA magna cum laude, an MA, and a PhD from the Department of Politics at Princeton University, where he was a graduate fellow of the James Madison Program in American Ideals and Institutions and served as coordinator of its Undergraduate Fellows Forum. Mark works with the Tikvah Fund in New York and the Hertog Foundation in Washington, D.C., and he has taught at the Straus Center for Torah and Western Thought at Yeshiva University.