During spring term, we will meet for class for two weeks, travel to Santiago, Chile, for a week, and return and debrief in Provo for two weeks after the program. In Santiago we will be involved in interviews, media projects, and cultural field trips that will support our research and production of a multimedia project focused on anti-poverty efforts. Experience culture, interact with locals, see street art, eat good food, and live in Chile. Our final project from the experience will build your professional portfolio. As approved by the School of Communications, the COMMS 370R course for this study abroad may count in place of one of the required communications classes.
