A panel of former college athletes, scholars, administrators, and a coach discuss a variety of issues surrounding race and sport as part of Black History Month activities. Breakout sessions to follow.

William Mitchell’s successful thirty-two-year career coaching college football at the Air Force Academy, Ohio University, and Wake Forest University started as an athlete on his high school football and track teams in North Carolina. Mitchell went on to earn four letters in track, three letters in football, and football MVP at East Carolina University. During his coaching career, he improved many of the teams and players he worked with, especially in their rushing games. Many went on to win national awards. Mitchell is a family man and served as a role model for many of his players.

Leonard Moore serves as associate vice president of Academic Diversity Initiatives and a professor of history at the University of Texas. In addition to Moore’s teaching and administrative work, he has worked with athletic programs across the country to implement diversity initiatives to help student athletes succeed in and out of the classroom. After receiving a PhD at The Ohio State University, he taught American and African American history at Louisiana State University and the University of Texas at Austin.

Cameron McCoy is an assistant professor of history at BYU, specializing in U.S. military history and race. McCoy is a BYU alum and former student athlete. He received a PhD at the University of Texas at Austin and completed a post-doc at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point before coming to BYU. He has served multiple combat tours and overseas assignments in support of Operations IRAQI FREEDOM and ENDURING FREEDOM and continues to serve as a reserve Marine Corps infantry officer.

Moderator: Mikaela Dufur, associate professor of sociology, BYU

Co-sponsored by BYU General Education and the Department of Sociology.