

Putting the Human into Humanitarian Efforts

How can we bring the best of ourselves to make a difference in the world?

Sharon Eubank has been the global director of Latter-day Saint Charities, the humanitarian organization of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, since 2011. She started employment in the Welfare Department of the church in 1998, working to establish Church employment offices in Africa and Europe as well as directing the Latter-day Saint Charities wheelchair initiative. In 2008 she became regional director of Latter-day Saint Charities in the Middle East, where she served for three years before becoming director of Latter-day Saint Charities worldwide. She served on the Relief Society general board from 2009–2012 and served as the First Counselor in the general Relief Society presidency from 2017–2022.
