Angela Mamani is a BYU Kennedy Center alumna with a degree in International Relations and minors in Global Business and Literacy. She currently works at Morgan Stanley in Salt Lake City, where she focuses on AI strategy, automation, and transformation within the Client Service Center. Her career has been both unexpected and rewarding since her time at BYU, allowing her to combine the global perspective and curiosity she developed as a student with her interests in technology, innovation, and business strategy. Originally from Indiana, Angela loves tennis, hiking, Latin dancing, and traveling and exploring new parts of the world.
