

Ghana Goodness

More than anything else, I feel gratitude for the experience McKenzie and I had in Ghana. I was thrilled to be in a new land and see its unique vegetation, climate, habitats, and way of life. I enjoyed the many different adventures and activities we participated in. I am happy with what we were able to do for the nonprofit organization, Ghana Make A Difference, that we worked with. I loved seeing and visiting the beautiful Accra Ghana Temple. I cherish the relationships built with fellow students who also came on this trip and the memories we will share. Finally, I appreciated seeing and coming to better understand the different perspectives of the people in Ghana. They value respect and relationships. They are less concerned with material things and more concerned about the people around them. Their culture is unique and fun. I love sharing laughter with them. More...
