

Stopping the Next World War

How are non-state actors like ISIS and state-sponsored rogue regimes using social media and digital outreach to attack our society and push would-be extremists to the edge? The roles of social media and the use of the dark web, hacking, and digital attacks are still largely misunderstood.

Haroon K. Ullah is the chief strategy officer for the U.S. Broadcasting Board of Governors (BBG), overseeing the Office of Policy and Research, including the elevation of BBG's policy engagement in the interagency, strategic planning and initiatives functions, and positioning within the broader U.S. government and with key stakeholders.

Co-sponsored by the Utah Council for Citizen Diplomacy based at Westminster College.