

BRASIL

BENEATH THE SURFACE

"ACROSS THE WAVES"

The Luso-Brazilian Republic of Letters at the Fin de Siécle

Robert P. Newcomb, Portuguese, University of California—Davis

26 March

3:00 P.M., 238 HRCB

Newcomb is an associate professor of Luso-Brazilian and Hispanic and Latin American literature at the University of California—Davis and co-director of the undergraduate Portuguese program in the Spanish and Portuguese department. He serves as the coeditor of the Iberian and Latin American Transatlantic Studies Reader and the principal investigator for the UC Comparative Iberian Studies Working Group. His numerous articles and books include a book in progress titled Iberianism and Crisis in Late 19th and Early 20th Century Spain and Portugal, and the book Nossa and Nuestra América: Inter-American Dialogues (2011). He received a BA in Luso-Brazilian studies and international relations and an MA and a PhD in Luso-Brazilian studies all from Brown University.