

Cultural Preference for Sons and Female Neglect in India: Policy Implications

Ramaswami Mahalingam

Assistant professor of psychology, University of Michigan

Wednesday, 15 February
3:00 P.M.
238 HRCB

Ramaswami Mahalingam is co-director of the Culture and Cognition Program and an associate of both the Center for South Asian Studies and the Institute for Research on Women and Gender at Michigan. Mahalingam's research specialties include culture and gender, political cognition, altruism, immigrant psychology, and cultural effects on cognition. He is the author of several books and numerous articles covering the cultural psychology of marginality as represented in the immigrant experience. Mahalingam received a BE in civil engineering from Annamalai University in India (1982), an MEd in research methodology and psychology in education (1994), and a PhD in developmental psychology (1998) both from the University of Pittsburgh.

This lecture is co-sponsored by Asian Studies and the Women's Research Institute.