Marisela Fleites-Lear is the Spanish Department chair at Green River Community College and a doctoral candidate at the University of Washington. Fleites was born in Havana as the revolutionary movement began, led by Fidel Castro. Her scholarly research focuses on the role of women in revolutionary societies, constructions of Cuban nationalism in the literary works of Cuban writers, and Cuban–U.S. relations. She is an active participant in movements for social justice and efforts to end the U.S. embargo on Cuba and leads the Washington State Advisory Council of the Cuban American Alliance Education Fund, Inc. With graduate degrees from universities in Cuba, Germany, and the United States, Fleites has also been a scholar-in-residence at the Center for Iberian and Latin American Studies at the University of California—San Diego.
