

“Distinguishing Yourself in the Workplace Through Education and Career Planning”

Monday, 27 September
3:00 P.M.
238 HRCB

Matthew J. Wilson

Director and associate professor of law, Temple University School of Law, Japan Program, and associate dean and general counsel, Temple University Japan

Matthew J. Wilson is the resident law professor and director of the JD and LLM programs at Temple University Japan. Wilson has over fifteen years international experience in legal and corporate matters involving Asia.

He teaches courses on Japanese and comparative law, international dispute resolution, and intellectual property law. He amassed this experience through professional activities in Japan, the United States, the Philippines, and the U.S. Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands. Prior to joining the law faculty, he engaged in private international law practice as an attorney at Akerman Senterfitt P.A., a large full-service Florida-based law firm, and as former general counsel for a telecommunications firm. As legal counsel to domestic and multinational corporations, his legal activities have encompassed complex commercial litigation, intellectual property litigation and transactions, as well as cross-border and general corporate matters. He also has extensive experience working in Japan for a large electronics manufacturer, hydrological and meteorological instruments maker, and a multinational medical devices company. He has appeared on primetime Japanese network television as a legal expert on multiple occasions and speaks frequently on transnational and U.S. legal matters. Wilson received a BS in political science, a BA in Asian studies, with a minor in Japanese from the University of Utah (1995) and a JD from Temple University School of Law (1999).