

To the Greater Glory: Faulkner as Cold War Ambassador to Latin America

Deborah N. Cohn

Associate professor of Spanish and Portuguese, Indiana University

Thursday, 6 October
11:00 A.M.
238 HRCB

Deborah N. Cohn's specialties are the comparative literatures of the Americas; Faulkner and Spanish American literature; and the Mexican intellectual infrastructure. Cohn is currently associate director of American Studies and an adjunct associate professor of comparative literature. She is also affiliated with the Center for Latin American and Caribbean Studies. Her current research, Creating the Boom's Reputation: The Promotion of the Boom in and by the U.S., is under contract with Vanderbilt University Press. Other publications include three forthcoming works: "A Tale of Two Translation Programs: Politics, the Market, and Rockefeller Funding for Latin American Literature in the United States during the 1960s and 1970s," Latin American Research Review (2006), "Faulkner, Latin America, and the Caribbean: Influence, Politics, and Academic Disciplines," A Companion to William Faulkner (2006), and "U.S. Southern Studies and Latin American Studies: Windows onto Postcolonial Studies," American Literature (2006), as well as numerous journal articles. In 2004, she was the recipient of a Faculty Fellowship from the National Endowment for the Humanities and a Franklin Research Grant from the American Philosophical Society. Cohn received an MA in Spanish literature from the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor (1990) and a PhD in Hispanic studies from Brown University (1996).

