

Global Awareness Lecture
Spring 2006

“African Families in the 21st Century”

Yaw Oheneba-Sakyi

Professor and chair, Africana and American Indian Studies,
California State University—Fresno

Wednesday, 14 June
NOON
238 HRCB

Yaw Oheneba-Sakyi has been in his current position as professor and chair of Africana and American Indian Studies at California State University—Fresno since 2002. Oheneba-Sakyi’s research interests cover Africana world view, comparative racial and ethnic relations, social demography of Africa, and gender and socioeconomic development. Previously, he served as director of the Africana studies program (1998–2002) and associate professor of sociology at SUNY Potsdam (1995–2002), as a research associate at SUNY Research Foundation (1992–95; 1999–2002), and as an assistant professor of sociology at SUNY Potsdam (1989–95). With Baffour K. Takyi, he edited African Families at the Turn of the 21st Century, in which they wrote two chapters: “Introduction to the Study of African Families: A Framework for Analysis” and “The Study of African Families: Concluding Remarks” (2006). In May 2002, he received the Chancellor’s Award for Excellence in Teaching from SUNY. He was the recipient of a $3,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) Faculty Development Program to participate in the 2000 Potsdam NEH Summer Seminar for Faculty, “Africa and the African Diaspora: Social Dynamism and Artistic Expressions” (May–June 2000). He received a bachelor’s degree with honors from the University of Ghana in Accra (1979), a master’s degree from State University of New York (SUNY) in Albany (1985), and a PhD from Brigham Young University (1989).