

Global Focus Lecture

Summer Term 2005

Putin's Russia and U.S. Relations

Tobias A. Bradford

Public diplomacy officer, U.S. Embassy, Moscow

Wednesday, 27 July
NOON
238 HRCB

Tobias A. Bradford has been in Moscow since August 2004 and is responsible for all programs dealing with professional development, including the international visitor program; community connections and business for Russia; productivity enhancement; professional education and training; outreach to think tanks and the intellectual community; the U.S.–Russia experts forum; and the U.S.–Russia volunteer initiative. Prior to joining the Foreign Service, he spent several years in the private sector and in training and development. He has lived in Egypt, Germany, Jordan, Pakistan, Paris, Russia, El Salvador, and South Africa, and loves to travel with his wife, Niki, and daughter, Madison. Bradford completed a BA in Russian and communication studies and an MOB at Brigham Young University, as well as coursework in international development at the Kennedy Center. He served a mission for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Russia (1992–1994).

