

Global Awareness Lecture
Fall 2007

Causes of Anti-Americanism in the Arab World

Abdelmahdi Al-soudi

Professor of Middle East Studies, Graduate School of International Studies (GSIS), Denver University

Wednesday, 28 November
NOON
238 HRCB

Abdelmahdi Alsoudi, a professor of Middle East studies at Denver University, is also director of the Jordan Policy Center and professor of political sociology at Jordan University. Alsoudi is a former visiting professor (international policy fellowship) Georgetown University (2005), visiting scholar (DAAD grant) at Bonn University (2004), Princess Rahmeh University College (2002–03), and professor at United Arab Emirates University (2000–02). He has participated in many international and regional conferences and published several articles on different socio-political issues such as: Islam and democracy, anti-Americanism in the Arab world, and democracy and political reform in Jordan and the Arab world. He joined the Center for Strategic Studies in Jordan as a senior researcher in 1986 and in 1988 joined the Sociology Department where he lectures and supervises MA and PhD students to the present day. Active in the large group of Arab academics and parliamentarians in the field of democracy and political reform in the Arab world, they have regular meetings and conferences to devise policies for democracy and political reform looking for greater cooperation with American and European academics, experts, and policy makers to achieve this goal. He received a PhD from Keele University in the UK (1986).