

THE THERAPEUTIC NATURE OF CROSS-CULTURAL RELATIONSHIPS:

LESSONS FROM MY INTERNATIONAL
FIELD STUDY EXPERIENCE

DAVID TATE

Instructor, Departments of Radiology and Psychiatry, Harvard Medical School

THURSDAY, 17 SEPTEMBER
NOON
238 HRCB

David Tate is an instructor in the Departments of Radiology and Psychiatry at Harvard Medical School, where he conducts clinical research with various neurologic patient populations. Tate's interests are in studying brain/behavior relationships utilizing state of the art medical imaging. He is a BYU alumnus with a PhD in clinical psychology and a two-time field study alumnus to India.