

Understanding Pacific Island Education

Victor Narsimulu

Educational Leadership and Foundations, doctoral candidate

Friday, 3 February

NOON

238 HRCB

Victor Narsimulu has conducted international field studies in several countries, including Fiji, Ethiopia, India, China, and Japan, where he worked and consulted with NGOs dealing with female infanticide, AIDS, formal/non-formal education, and microfinance. Narsimulu received a BA in intercultural studies, with an emphasis in cultural anthropology and Pacific Islands studies from BYU—Hawaii, an MA in organizational behavior, with an emphasis in international development from BYU—Provo, and he is a doctoral candidate in the Educational Leadership and Foundations program at BYU—Provo. He was born and raised in the Fiji Islands.

International Field Studies Lecture Series

International Study Programs (ISP) and the David M. Kennedy Center for International Studies are pleased to announce the new International Field Studies Lecture Series. The lectures will highlight past field study students, who conducted research over the past decade since field studies began at BYU. The more senior alumni will often include descriptions of how their original international experience contributed to their further academic achievements, career, and life paths. It is hoped that this lecture series will not only be interesting and educational, but will also illustrate, for BYU students, the possibilities, and advantages, of conducting cross-cultural field work, as well as to encourage undergraduate research and mentored learning.