Tom Zeller, Jr.

EDITOR AND WRITER, NEW YORK TIMES

Tom Zeller, Jr. is an editor and writer for the New York Times covering alternative energy and green business. After a year as an editor at large for National Geographic magazine, Zeller returned to the New York Times in July 2008. He spent much of the last decade as a reporter and editor covering various subjects for the Times—from technology and cyberfraud to culture and politics. He was also the founder of the Lede, the paper's news blog, in 2006. His awards for visual journalism and multimedia reporting include prizes for a collection of essays and graphics lending historical context to the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan from the Society of News Design and from the University of Navarra, Spain

(Malofiej Awards); an interactive reconstruction of the shooting of Amadou Diallo; and a multimedia documentary of a Louisiana plantation—part of the Times' Pulitzer prize-winning "How Race Is Lived in America" series. Originally from Ohio, Zeller received a BA in literature from Cleveland State University and a master's degree in journalism from Columbia University.

This lecture is sponsored by the New York Times Knowledge Network and is part of our campus educational partnership.
